This is the first edition of the first book to deal uniquely and comprehensively with the challenge of the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST, Graduate Level.

Today, this examination has become a required or suggested step for admission to leading graduate schools, for matriculation, qualification, or classification in a masters or doctoral program.

The Psychological Corporation, the administrators of the examination, officially describe the MAT as "a high-level mental abilities test which requires the solution of a series of intellectual problems stated in terms of verbal analogies" and as "a difficult test of information and verbal reasoning ability used in the admission of students to graduate school." For many years, graduate students and other applicants have had to take this elite examination without the channeled preparation to be derived from the use of express learning resource materials and, consequently, have faced this trial of mental ability with great insecurity.

This book should be of purposeful aid to graduate school applicants:

1. It is based on the most authoritative principle of learning, the functional way of "learning by doing"

The candidate "takes" the actual examination as he grapples with the thousands of valid and authentic questions and problems in the book and, then, diagnostically checks himself.

2. It is sequential and systematic

The book follows the actual format and content of the Test and provides programmed, step-by-step instruction together with intensive practice and drill.

3. The emphases are appropriate and balanced

Comprehensively adequate emphasis in appropriate detail has been given to each of the fields of learning touched upon in the examination. Thus, it is reasonable to expect that the largest part of the material would be devoted to the aspects of general vocabulary and general information. But the other fields -- classics, history, literature, mathematics, science, and social science -- have been treated with a proportional balance.

Never before in academic history has material of this type been presented in a full-scale book. While verbal analogy questions in the fields of general vocabulary and general information are fairly standard in college-entrance, aptitude, and mental-ability testing, this question-type has never before been adapted for, or applied to, achievement testing, on a graduate level, in so many major academic fields. THE MATERIALS PRESENTED IN THIS BOOK ARE UNIQUE. They have been SPECIFICALLY created and developed for passing the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST.

This book, too, is pointedly encyclopedic in content, going far beyond the essential needs of the candidate for the examination itself. The hundreds of questions presented in the various fields are not only varied in form and sampling in content, but are also progressive in conception and contemporary in reference, with a freshness and subtlety that make for interest and invite challenge. The aim has been to furnish a wealth of practice-drill materials so that this book may continue to be a source of learning for the student and a resource for the instructor.

4. A climate of success is established for the candidate

The correct answers which are furnished for all questions, make self testing and diagnosis feasible and practicable by educationally-sound placement at the end of each unit.

5. The Book is on a GRADUATE level

The special, higher level nature of the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST has been recognized and respected. This is reflected by and extended in the professional plane of the scholarship and the academic quality of the included materials.

6. The Book fulfills the purpose intended

Pointedly and precisely, ONLY materials that will specifically help prepare the candidate for the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST have been included in this book. Tangential and "filler" materials have been rigidly excluded.

MILLER ANALOGIES TEST

1. WHAT IS THE MILLER ANALOGIES TEST (MAT)

Applicants seeking admission to leading graduate schools are required or advised to take the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST for admission to graduate study or for financial aid in graduate institutions. Government agencies, other institutions or organizations of a scientific, social or educational nature, and certain business firms, require this test of applicants for employment or qualification. In this connection, it is noteworthy that, recently, HEW (the Federal cabinet Department of Health, Education and Welfare) made the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST a primary requirement for licensed and serving school counselors who applied for admission to a long-term in-service training course for educational counselors sponsored by the Department.

The MAT is officially described as "a high-level mental ability test which requires the solution of a series of intellectual problems stated in terms of verbal analogies." Thus, couched in the form of verbal analogies, the Miller test draws upon the fields of general vocabulary, general information, the classics, history, literature, mathematics, science, and social science.

The Miller is a multiple-choice (four-item), objective-type examination, which appears in several equivalent forms. Each form contains the same number of items (100), which, it is claimed, appear in order of difficulty on the examination.

The (analogy) questions (stems) themselves are all of the one-blank type, that is, only one word or term is to be supplied, and the items (answer-items) are all of the four-choice type, which are presented in a parenthetical form, instead of the usual progressive block form. In addition, on the Miller, the missing item (blank) may occur in any part (position) of the question-stem. That is, the usual traditional sequence of the one-blank verbal analogy question is violated in that the missing item (blank) may be in the first, second, or third part of the stem, instead of in the fixed fourth position. However, this has (and should have) little bearing on the nature, or the difficulty, of the verbal analogy question as presented.

It is interesting to note that the Miller test is of the one-blank type rather than of the two-blank type; nor does it contain a mixture of both. Moreover, it is a four-choice type of test rather than a five-choice. These facts are important in assaying the difficulty level of the Miller: difficulty is increased by the two-blank type of question and by the five-item choice. However, there is no guarantee that the format of the Miller will remain the same. We have, therefore, included in this book not only the two-blank type of question, but have also kept rigidly to the five-item presentation of answer-items.

Fifty minutes are allotted for answering the 100 analogies. (Answers are to be recorded on a separate Answer Sheet.) The analogies are claimed to occur in order of difficulty, and candidates are advised not to waste time on those that are troublesome but to come back to them after they have tried all of the analogies. There is evidently no deduction for wrong answers since the candidate is directed-- pointedly-- to guess if he is not sure of the answers. Therefore, it is to the candidate's interest to answer each and every question -- even if this entails sheer guessing.

Because of its composition, in that it specifically lists subject areas in addition to the usual fields of general vocabulary and general information, the Miller must be considered both an aptitude and an achievement test at the same time. So far as the Miller samples the strength of ability of the candidate to see relationships, to analyze relationships, to make relationships, it may be considered an aptitude test, particularly in the areas of general vocabulary and general information. So far as it measures the ability of the candidate to rearrange learned materials and information, e. g. , in the various academic fields, it must be considered an achievement test.

Thus, the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST becomes a fine instrument appropriate to the graduate level with which to probe and measure the mental ability of the graduate student.

The student or candidate who takes this examination must have reviewed and overlearned the basic knowledges and understandings contained in the various academic fields if he is to successfully readapt this content in the form of verbal analogies. The MAT implicitly presupposes a strong grounding in the essential content of the several academic disciplines with which it deals in the reorganized form of the verbal analogy. The conclusion is inevitable that this examination is much harder than it appears, and must be prepared for specifically.

2. WHEN IS THE MILLER ANALOGIES TEST GIVEN

This examination is given throughout the year by appointment at registered testing centers, a list of which is contained in the official Bulletin of Information, a copy of which appears hereafter.

In New York City, the examination is administered by The Psychological Corporation at its offices, on Friday mornings, at 9 o'clock. An appointment may be made by telephone as late as the day before the test; by mail, sufficient time should be allowed to receive confirmation of appointment.

The fee is $5, payable at the time of testing, and includes the score report sent to the examinee, and up to three (3) transcripts of the results, sent to three (3) addresses of the examinee's choice provided that they are listed at the time of the examination. Reports are mailed the same day of the test.

Inquire of the graduate school(s) to which you are applying as to which of the administration dates would best meet their requirements.

3. HOW DOES THE CANDIDATE APPLY TO A GRADUATE SCHOOL

To apply to a graduate school, obtain directly from the school or schools in which you are interested their admissions application. You are then to complete the application, including all the requirements and details therein outlined, and return this material directly to the school(s). One of the requirements on the application form of certain graduate schools is to apply for and to take the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST.

4. HOW DOES THE CANDIDATE APPLY FOR THE MILLER ANALOGIES TEST

Write directly to The Psychological Corporation, 304 East 45th Street, New York, New York 10017, requesting the official Bulletin of Information. This bulletin contains a directory of Testing Centers. In this directory, locate the Center nearest and most convenient to you. Make an appointment with that Center for a testing date. Under special circumstances, such as excessive distance from a Center, or unavailability or inability on your part to keep the appointment, write to The Psychological Corporation, requesting a special examination and giving the reasons therefor. Arrangements for tests can be made not only in the United States, but in many foreign countries as well.

5. HOW ARE SCORES ON THE MILLER ANALOGIES TEST REPORTED

An Examinee's Report, self-addressed at the time of the examination, will be returned to you within a few days with your score on it; this will constitute your personal record. The institution(s) to which your scores are to be reported will also receive your score within a few days.

6. IS RETESTING PERMITTED

In general, retesting is permitted when a period of more than two years has elapsed. Sometimes, a retest may be required by an institution. But it is incumbent upon you to state this fact and your reasons for seeking a retest if you have previously taken the test. A space is provided on the Registration Card for this declaration.

Since all test scores are recorded at The Psychological Corporation, when an examinee retakes the test, both current and previous scores are reported. This constitutes a policy of full disclosure but does not mean that retaking the test is forbidden.

7. WHAT IS THE IMPORTANCE OF THE SCORES ON THE MILLER ANALOGIES TEST

It can be said without equivocation that the scores on the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST are important for the candidate's acceptance. It can be equally firmly stated that this professional program places a high value on the scores achieved on this examination. This is for the reason that the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST is considered to be the one common denominator by which applicants from all institutions may be compared.

However, this does not mean that the results on the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST are of greater importance than, or exclude attention from, the other -- more general and more usual -- factors for selection, such as previous college and university records, letters of recommendation, reports of committees that have interviewed the applicant, the high school record, and similar data concerning the ability, character, and personality of the applicant. Stated in another way, the results of this graduate-level examination will never constitute the sole basis for considering the application for admission. However, it is an important factor to be considered with the others.

8. HOW SHOULD I PREPARE FOR THE MILLER ANALOGIES TEST

(1) This book, HOW TO PASS MILLER ANALOGIES TEST-QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS, has been specifically designed to prepare candidates for this examination. Basically, it should prove to be an effective resource for the candidate.

(2) In addition, since the MILLER ANALOGIES TEST is, at the same time, both an aptitude and an achievement test, it is urgently recommended that the student secure and study the appropriate volumes in our GRADUATE RECORD EXAMINATION SERIES, a listing of which is appended at the back of this book. In particular, with specific reference to the MAT, the candidate's attention is directed to:

Who Should Take These Tests

The primary purpose of these tests is to provide information to support your application for admission to graduate study or for financial aid in graduate institutions. Some scientific, social, and educational agencies and business firms require the tests of applicants for employment. Occasionally college or university advisers may request that you take one or more of the tests in your senior year. The tests are not to be taken by anyone prior to the senior year in college except for special programs which have had prior approval of The Psychological Corporation.

Testing Centers

In this directory locate the Center nearest or most convenient to you. Make an appointment with that Center for a mutually acceptable testing date. If you are more than 100 miles from a testing Center, or will not be able to reach a regular Center within a month, write to The Psychological Corporation requesting a "special examination," stating the circumstances. Arrangements for tests can be made in many foreign countries, but at least a month is needed. For Canada, the Philippines, England and Australia, see the directory listings.

Fees Assessed Locally

Fees are determined and collected locally. They will vary from Center to Center, but usually are five dollars or less. Centers will send as many as three reports for this basic fee if the institutions are named at the time of testing.

Reporting of Test Scores

An Examinee's Report, which you will address to yourself at the time of examination, will be returned to you by the Examiner within a few days with your score entered on it. This will be your personal record.

Ordinarily, you will want the scores sent only to the appropriate administrators in institutions, agencies or companies which have formally required that you submit scores on one or more of these tests in support of an application.

You may choose to have scores sent to other addresses who have not required that you take any of the tests. You should recognize, however, that some such recipients may not know about these tests or how to utilize the scores. It is generally unwise to have the scores reported to anyone other than admissions officers and advisers in educational institutions or personnel officers in agencies and companies. The Psychological Corporation does not provide information on interpretation to persons who are not qualified to use and interpret psychological tests and the technical manuals associated with them.

You may request the sending of official reports of your test scores as follows:

- At the time of examination you may list one to three addressees to which the Center is to send official transcripts of your scores. These reports are included in the testing fee and normally will be sent out within a few days. You must know the correct, complete addresses when you come to take the tests. NOTE: You are entitled to these three reports only if you specify the addressees when you take the test; all subsequent reports are one dollar each—see b., below.
- Subsequent reports. After the date of testing, all further reports of your test scores will be sent out directly by The Psychological Corporation and only upon a written request from you. The Examinee's Report tells how you may requisition such additional reports. The fee is one dollar for each address to which you want test scores sent. Test scores are recorded for seven years at The Psychological Corporation.

Retesting

When it is found that an examinee has taken the test within twenty-four months, both current and previous scores are reported. This does not mean that taking the test more than once is forbidden but only that full disclosure of all scores will be made.

In general, retesting is considered appropriate when the previous testing occurred more than two years earlier. In some instances a retest may be required by an institution. If you have taken the test before, you will be asked to state your reasons for seeking a retest.

Dear Candidate:

Enclosed is a list of Centers at which the Miller Analogies Test may be taken. Please examine it to ascertain which institution is most readily accessible to you. We suggest you get in touch with the person in charge of the examination at the institution of your choice to make an appointment to take the test.

If any problems should arise in this connection, please feel free to write us again.

The MAT is a high-level mental ability test which requires the solution of a series of intellectual problems stated in terms of verbal analogies. The analogies tap the fields of science, mathematics, social science, history, literature, classics, general vocabulary, and general information. An examinee is not expected to be a specialist in any of these fields. No special studying for the test is necessary or desirable. The test takes fifty minutes.

The reproduction of the cover page of one form of the MAT on the reverse side of this sheet will give you some understanding of the structure of the test. The analogies, of course, are more difficult than these examples.

Sincerely yours,

Test Division

MILLER ANALOGIES TEST

Graduate Level

W. S. Miller

DO NOT TURN THIS PAGE UNTIL YOU ARE TOLD TO DO SO.

YOU WILL RECORD YOUR ANSWERS ON A SPECIAL ANSWER SHEET.

MAKE NO MARKS ON THIS TEST BOOKLET.

FILL OUT THE HEADING ON THE ANSWER SHEET.

(This is Form J — so make a check mark on the line after J on the Answer Sheet.)

Read these directions very carefully and do what they tell you to do.

Look at the first sample analogy below. Pain is the right answer because pain is related to PLEASURE as DARK is related to LIGHT. On the Answer Sheet make a mark under c for the first sample to show that choice c. pain, is the right answer. The diagram at the right shows you how to mark on your Answer Sheet.

SAMPLES

1. LIGHT : DARK :: PLEASURE : (a. picnic, b. day, c. pain, d. night)
2. LEAVE : DEPART :: (a. stay, b. go, c. home, d. come) : REMAIN
3. LAUGH : (a. joke, b. cry, c. grin, d. humor) :: JOY : SORROW
4. (a. 4, b. 5, c. 7, d. 6) : 12 :: 12 : 24

How to Mark on Answer Sheet

Choose the proper word in the parentheses in Sample 2 and mark the corresponding letter in the proper place on your Answer Sheet. Do the same thing in the third and fourth samples.

Now examine carefully what you have done. On your Answer Sheet you should have marked choice a for Sample 2, because the right answer is a. stay. For the third sample, you should have marked b as your choice, because b. cry is the right answer. For Sample 4, the right answer is 6 (6 is to 12 as 12 is to 24), so on your Answer Sheet you should have marked d as your choice.

On the next three pages are 100 analogies like the samples. When the signal "Begin" is given, turn over the page and solve as many of the one hundred analogies as you can in 50 minutes. The analogies are in the order of difficulty. Don't waste too much time on those that cause you trouble; come back to them after you have tried all of the analogies. If you can't be sure, guess. For every analogy, choose one of the four possible answers in the parentheses and record your choice on the Answer Sheet.

Do not make any marks on this test blank.

You may ask any questions you wish before the signal "Begin" is given; please ask no questions after the signal "Begin" is given.

Now wait for the signal to turn the page and begin.

VERBAL ANALOGIES

The verbal-analogy type question is now a very popular component of scholastic aptitude tests, intelligence tests, and civil service examinations; this form is also being used in achievement testing.

The verbal analogy is considered an excellent measure for evaluating the ability of the student to reason with and in words. It is not a test of vocabulary per se, for very rarely are the words that are used in this type of question difficult or abstruse in meaning (as they are, for example, in the same-opposite or sentence-completion type). Rather, they are everyday terms and phrases descriptive of materials and actions familiar to all of us.

The verbal analogy is a test of word relationships and idea relationships, involving a neat and algebraic-like arrangement in ratio (proportion) form not of numbers but of words. Some testers see in this type of question the development on the verbal (linguistic or qualitative) side of the same logical reasoning as occurs on the mathematical (numerical or quantitative) side in number problems. This type of question is ranked just after the reading-comprehension type in difficulty. However, it constitutes by far the most fascinating and challenging area in aptitude testing.

In general, three levels of ability are involved in answering the verbal analogy question: first, and easiest in this connection, is the ability to understand the meanings of the words used in the question (understanding); second, and more difficult, is the ability to comprehend the relationship between the subject, or question, pair of words (the process of logical reasoning); and third, and most difficult of all, is the ability to select from the five (pairs of) choices given, that choice which bears the same relationship to (within) itself as the subject words bear to one another. This involves analysis, comparison, and judgment (the process of evaluation).

In the verbal-analogy type of question, two important symbols are generally employed, which must be thoroughly understood. These are the colon (:), which is to be translated into words when reading the question in the same way as its mathematical equivalent, that is, "is to"; and the double colon (::), which is to be translated as "in the same way as." Thus, the analogy, THIEF : PRISON :: juvenile delinquent : reformatory, is to be read, A thief is to a prison in the same way as a juvenile delinquent is to a reformatory. Or, reading for meaning, we could say instead, "A thief is punished by being sent to a prison in the same way as a juvenile delinquent is punished by being sent to a reformatory."

Sample Questions And Explanations

DIRECTIONS: Each question in this part consists of a pair of words in capital letters, which have a certain relationship to each other, followed either by a third word in capital letters and five numbered words in small letters (1 blank missing) OR by five numbered pairs of words in small letters (2 blanks missing). Choose either the number of the word that is related to the third word in capital letters OR of the pair of words that are related to each other in the same way as the first two capitalized words are related to each other, and mark the appropriate space on your answer sheet.

1. EROSION : ROCKS :: DISSIPATION :
1. character 2. temperance 3. penance 4. influence 5. sincerity
2. SKELETON : BODY :: LAW :
1. criminal 2. jail 3. judge 4. society 5. jury
3. TRAIN : WHISTLE :: :
1. air raid : siren 2. swimmer : raft 3. singer : song
4. car : horn 5. airplane : propeller
4. ANARCHY : LAWLESSNESS :: :
1. autocracy : peace 2. disturbance : safety
3. government : order 4. confusion : law
5. democracy : dictatorship
5. UMBRELLA : RAIN :: :
1. roof : snow 2. screen : insects 3. sewer : water
4. body : disease 5. gong : dinner

Explanation of Question 1

Item 1. , character, is correct.

Erosion is a geological development that wears away Rocks. This is an example of a cause-effect relationship - a concrete relationship.

Dissipation wears away character (Item 1.) in the same way - however, this is an abstract relationship.

But the comparison is apt and appropriate. This is a usual, general type of analogy whose difficulty is compounded by the fact that a concrete relationship is compared with an abstract one.

Item 2. , temperance (moderation), is merely one aspect of character.

Item 3. , penance (repentance), bears no relationship to dissipation in the sense of the subject words.

Item 4. , influence, and Item 5. , sincerity, may or may not be affected by dissipation.

This question is an example of a one-blank analogy, that is, only one word is to be supplied in the answer (a subject pair and a third subject word being given in the question itself).

Explanation of Question 2

Item 4. , society, is correct.

The Skeleton is the structural element of the Body. This is an example of a part-whole relationship - a concrete relationship.

Law is the structural element of society - an abstract relationship.

Item 1. , criminal, Item 2. , jail, Item 3. , judge, and Item 5. , jury, are not related in the same way to Law.

Explanation of Question 3

Item 4. , car : horn, is correct.

A Train uses its Whistle for warning purposes just as a car uses its horn for the same purpose. This is an example of an object-method relationship.

Item 1. , air raid : siren is incorrect because an air raid is an event and not an object or thing in the sense of a train or a car.

Item 2. , swimmer : raft, Item 3. , singer : song, and Item 5. , airplane : propeller, obviously do not bear the same relationship to the subject pair.

This is an example of a two-blank analogy, that is, a pair of words is to be supplied. This is the more difficult type of analogy, and the one most frequently encountered on the examination.

Explanation of Question 4

Item 3. , government : order , is correct.

Anarchy , or no government , is characterized by lawlessness while a government is characterized by order. This is an example of an object (situation) : characteristic relationship.

Item 1. , autocracy : peace , is incorrect since very often autocracy (absolute monarchy or rule by an individual) is characterized by war.

Item 2. , disturbance : safety , is manifestly untrue.

Item 4. , confusion : law , is likewise untrue.

Item 5. , democracy : dictatorship , bears no relationship to the meaning conveyed by the subject pair.

Explanation of Question 5

Item 2. , screen : insects , is correct.

By means of an umbrella , one keeps the rain off his person just as a screen keeps insects out of the house. This is an example of an object : assists relationship.

Item 1. , roof : snow , is not correct since a roof keeps out many other things as well , e. g. , light , heat , rain , insects , etc.

Item 3. , sewer : water , is incorrect since a sewer keeps water in or water flows through and in a sewer.

Item 4. , body : disease , is incorrect since often disease enters and destroys the body.

Item 5. , gong : dinner , is incorrect since the gong merely summons to dinner but does not keep anyone away.

As can be discerned from the examples above , there are many possible relationships on which word analogies may be formed. Some of these will be listed and illustrated below. However , the important point is not to ponder over labels and attempt to peg the relationships thereby. This is unnecessary as well as time-consuming. The real object or the real method is to examine and to fully comprehend the relationship expressed in the subject pair and then to select as the correct answer that item which most approximately is in greatest consonance with all or most of the aspects of the given relationship.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ANSWERING THE VERBAL ANALOGY QUESTION (APTITUDE)

1. Always keep in mind that a verbal analogy is a relationship of likeness between two things, consisting in the resemblances not, usually, of the things themselves but of two or more of their attributes, functions, circumstances, or effects. Therefore, in the one-blank or two-blank fill-ins, you are not looking so much for similarity in structure (although this may prove to be a factor, too), as you are for a relationship in the functioning of the subject words.
2. How do we proceed to answer the verbal-analogy type question? First, discover for yourself in a meaningful way the exact relationship existing between the subject words. Whether you are able to label or tag this relationship is not so important (as we have said before) as to understand the relationship that exists. The logical second and final step is to examine the possible answers given and to ascertain which of these possibilities, on the basis of meaning, order, and form, best bears a similar relationship to the subject pair.
3. For the analogy in question, the subject words (i. e., the question words given in the first part of the analogy) need not be of the same class, type, order, or species as the object words (i. e., the answer words or fill-ins). For example, in the analogy, BUCCANEER : SAILOR :: fungus : plant, the subject words in capital letters are types of people, the object words in small letters refer to types of things. However, the analogy that exists is on the basis of a descriptive relationship between these two different sets of words. (The first word in each pair constitutes the depredatory or despoiling form of the second, which is the general category name.) Thus, it is actually the total effect of the first pair on each other that is being compared with the total effect of the second pair on each other: this is what really counts, and not the individual components of each pair.

4. The order of the object words must be in the same sequence as the order of the subject words. For example, the analogy, INAUGURATION : PRESIDENT :: ordination : priest, is correct. But, INAUGURATION : PRESIDENT :: priest : ordination, would be incorrect. Watch for this reversal of order in word sequence; it is a common source of entrapment for the uninitiated.
5. Likewise, it is necessary to check to see that the parts of speech used in the analogy are the same, and occur in the same sequence. For example, if the subject pair contains a noun and an adjective in that order, the object pair must contain a noun and an adjective in that order. Thus, MOTHER : GOOD :: murderer : bad, is correct. But, MOTHER : GOOD :: murderer : badly, is incorrect.
6. The best way to answer this type of question -- one-blank or two-blanks -- is to study intensively the relationship contained in the given pair. Having fully comprehended this relationship and, perhaps, having "labeled" it, proceed to scan the possible answers, choosing the most likely one. This will save time, and avoid needless trial and error.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ANSWERING THE VERBAL ANALOGY QUESTION (ACHIEVEMENT)

1. All of the suggestions for answering the verbal analogy question (aptitude) listed above are equally valid for answering the achievement-type of verbal analogy question. In addition, the various types of analogies or relationships, in one form or other, previously tabulated, may also be found in this second type of verbal analogy question.
2. However, by virtue of the fact that this second type is testing achievement or acquired knowledge, by far the greatest number of these questions will stress content or fact. In other words, while it is entirely possible (and many such questions are provided in the various tests that follow) that abstract conceptual relationships may be used in connection with the achievement type, comparatively few will exclusively emphasize or deal with evaluatory abstractions per se. Rather, facts in the form of events, authorship, locale, time, size, shape,color, rank, family, etc., will form the basis of the analogous relationships to be discerned and applied.
3. But, this does not mean that the achievement-type of verbal analogy question will be easier to answer than the aptitude-type. On the contrary. By keen and analytical reasoning, the aptitude question can be successfully answered. Not so with the achievement question. Here, one must have knowledge -- and positive grasp -- of the material presented. Inductive or deductive thinking will still play a part in rendering a choice. But this factor will be a small one compared to the much larger concern of comprehending and identifying the information presented. Therefore, knowledge of subject matter is of paramount importance in this area, and the suggestions made in the Introduction for further study of the achievement areas, are of vital importance to the candidate.
4. Let us illustrate by some concrete examples.
(The following analogy questions are all of the 2-blank type.)

From the area of literature

(1) CLYDE GRIFFITHS : THEODORE DREISER ::

1. Budd Schulberg : F. Scott Fitzgerald
2. Scarlett O'Hara : Harper Lee
3. Julien Sorel : John Galsworthy
4. Frederic Henry : Ernest Hemingway
5. Becket : Henry II

It becomes readily apparent that this analogy is based upon the relationship of a character in a book to the author of that book. In the aptitude-type, the pith of the challenge would reside in seeing this relationship of character to author (with the question, of course, expressed in a less specific form). This insight alone would probably suffice to achieve an answer or would be the answer itself. However, this is where the achievement verbal analogy question begins. Having perceived the relationship (the easiest part of the task), one must now grapple with the facts. What other item in the answer-stem reflects a similar relationship in fact (not in concept, alone)? The answer here is item 4.

(2) WILLIAM TYNDALE : BIBLE ::

1. Dante : Divina Commedia
2. George Chapman : Iliad
3. Christopher Marlowe : Tamburlaine the Great
4. Alexander Pope : The Dunciad
5. Thomas Gray : Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard

The relationship here is one of author to his work in a particular form -- a translation of the work. This fact of scholarship content must be known to enable the candidate to go beyond the relationship, that is, to find the correct factual answer. The correct answer is 2.

(3) CHRISTINA ROSSETTI : DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI ::

1. Rose Macaulay : Thomas Babington Macaulay
2. Mary Shelley : Percy Bysshe Shelley
3. Elizabeth Barrett : Robert Browning
4. Edith Sitwell : Sacheverell Sitwell
5. Emily Dickinson : Elinor Wylie

The relationship is evidently one of sister to brother, both of whom were distinguished authors. More important is knowledge of the fact that there is only one pair among the answer-items which fulfills the special blood relationship as well as the general author relationship. This cannot come from mere deduction. It must be based upon acquired information, learned and overlearned. The correct answer is 4.

Enough has been said and hinted at up to this point to clinch the thesis that has been proposed, namely, that the achievement-type question begins where the aptitude-type leaves off; that the MILLER test becomes a graduate vehicle in the sense, and in the directions, that it calls upon the faculties of content and learning; that the degree of mastery entailed in answering the aptitude-type is exceeded by the demands of the achievement-type; and that, finally, specific preparation in the form of review of content -- preferably in the form of area summaries -- must be attempted for effective preparation.

There follow Tests in the various areas of the MILLER examination which should serve to achieve for the candidate the most thorough-going, functional, directed preparation ever developed for this test. More than 2,000 questions -- both of the 1-blank and 2-blank-types -- are comprised in these Tests, the most overwhelming array of such questions ever assembled in any one vehicle of study. It is now up to the candidate to essay as many of these questions as possible, without failing at least to sample all of the fields. A complete, page-by-page, question-by-question, application should be the desideratum.

DIRECTIONS: Each question in this part consists of two capitalized words which have a certain relationship to each other, and a third capitalized word which is followed by five numbered words in small letters. Choose the number of the word which is related in the SAME way to the third capitalized word as the first two capitalized words are related to each other, and mark the appropriate space on your answer sheet.

DIRECTIONS: Read each question and its numbered answers. When you have decided which answer is correct, blacken the corresponding space on this sheet with the special pencil. Make your mark as long as the pair of lines, and move the pencil point up and down firmly to make a heavy black line. If you change your mind, erase your first mark completely. Make no stray marks; they may count against you.
